A disposition is noticeable throughout the city to remove from private gardens fences, and particularly brick walls. The latest instances of this is the abolition of the wall so many years surrounded the residence of Judge Wyite. The outer world is now permitted a feast of eyes, for which every passer by will feel gracini. In a partial manner the government introduced this liberal idea, opening the view of its beautini parks, save for a light inclosure of post and ename. Other of its grounds, however, alliferation the old, ugly, and inconvenient custom of high folioes of from with gates, while still others are pent in without gates.
